The Show Girl

By MAX PEMBERTON

HENRY GASTONARD, a student in Paris, lost his diamond-studded cigarette case at the famous Quat-Z-Arts Ball. How? "You will guess it the first time," he explains; "Mimi the Simpleton had thrown her fair arms about me, not in an ecstasy of love or passion, but purely to pocket the case and enjoy the contents at her leisure."

Naturally this unusual way of making an acquaintance gets him into complications which enliven all the rest of the book. Mimi grows more and more lovable and desirable. She takes up all of Henry's time. This worries his good friend Paddy, because the heedless young fellow will be cut out of a large inheritance if he is not earning by work a certain yearly income before he is twenty-five. A perilously short time remains and still Henry pursues the alluring Mimi. How this exciting race comes out is very brightly told. The characters are sympathetically drawn and the whole story is delightful.

WISDOM, humor and love are excellently well compounded in "The Making of Bobby Burnit," by George Randolph Chester.

Each is present in the story in precisely the right proportion, and in the skillful hands of the author the three have been mixed and stirred and beaten to lightness, and finally browned to a delicious crisp.

The story is indeed instantly tempting even to the fastidious appetite and it is thoroughly digestible by the most capricious fancy.

Would an up-to-date selected list of nearly 800 library addresses—everyone of them a bona-fide book buyer all the year round—interest you?

THERE is a constant call for a select list of public and semi-public libraries in the United States and Canada having funds for book buying every year. Less than one-quarter of the total number of libraries are "live" buyers, and the waste in circularizing a general list is a discouragement to many. To meet this demand there has been included in the Annual Library Index, 1908, just published, a special list of the leading public and semi-public libraries in the United States and Canada confined for the most part to those having not less than 10,000 volumes, $2,000 annual income, and $400 annual expenditure for books. This list includes approximately eight hundred libraries, and gives the name and location of the library, the name of the librarian, the number of volumes, the accessions for the past library year, the annual income and the annual book expenditure—the facts which dealers especially need in appealing to libraries. This list is not published separately but is included with the other valuable features of the Annual Library Index.

THE SEASON'S BASEBALL STORY

THE SHORT STOP

By ZANE GREY

Chase Alloway tires of his six-dollar-a-week factory job and goes after fame and fortune on the diamond. For awhile he is "up against it," but the tide turns and not only fame but several things just as good come his way. The author was a professional ball player for many years and knows what he is writing about. Every boy who has ever handled a bat, and perhaps some of those who just read the bulletin boards, will want to read this exciting yarn.

NOTES IN SEASON.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS publish this week a work on "English Literature in the Nineteenth Century," by Laurie Magnus; also, the fourth volume of "Contemporary France," by Gabriel Hanotaux, translated by John Charles Tarver, covering the period from 1877-1882.

DESMOND FITZGERALD, for many years travelling representative for a number of publishing houses, has established himself in the publishing business as Desmond Fitzgerald, Incorporated, at 156 Fifth Avenue, New York.

His first book is entitled "A Husband by Proxy."

MACMILLAN & COMPANY, London, will publish in November Dr. Sven Hedin's new book, "Trans-Himalaya: Discoveries and Adventures in Tibet." The work, which will give a full account of the explorer's last journey, will be in two volumes, and will contain about 400 illustrations.

D. APPLETON & Co. have published an exciting story by Roy Norton, entitled "The Toll of the Sea," which deals with the San Francisco earthquake and an adventure in the Southern Pacific, where a remnant of the Aztecs holds forth with ideas of destroying the rest of the world.

A. C. McCLURG & Co. will publish June 26 "The Short Stop," by Zane Grey. The author was a professional ball player for many years and knows his subject. The hero tires of his $6-a-week factory job and goes after fame and fortune on the diamond, and the story is full of spirit and surprises.

J. B. LIPPINCOTT COMPANY have just brought out an important work on "Sanitary Engineering," by Moore and Silcox. The work is in two large volumes, with 160 tables and 920 illustrations, including 91 folding plates. It is so comprehensive in its treatment that the work may be considered in the light of an encyclopædia of sanitary engineering.

DUFFIELD & Co. have just completed their exceedingly well-made ten-volume edition of the novels of Jane Austen in The St. Martin's Illustrated Library of Standard Authors. The type is large and as a light paper has been used the volumes are decidedly comfortable to hold. The green cloth binding is also attractive. R. Brinley Johnson, who provides the introductory notes, is wisely brief, confining himself chiefly to matters of fact.

L. C. PAGE & Co. have brought out an interesting, at times even thrilling, story of the Revolution for young people, entitled "Marching With Morgan," by John V. Lane, illustrated by John Goss. The story will interest boys of all ages, if they are the right kind of boys, from the grandson to the grandfather age. The scene of the story is the beautiful Kennebec River region, up which Morgan and his famous riflemen sailed on their way to Quebec in the autumn of 1775.

MOFFAT, YARD & Co. publish this week a work entitled "Tuberculosis, a Preventable and Curable Disease," by Dr. S. A. Knopf, professor of phisio-therapy at the New York Post-Graduate Medical School, etc., one of the highest authorities on the subject. It is a book for the patient and those living with him, for the physician, the nurse and sanitarian, for the statesman and legislator, for the educator and teacher. But it is also far more than this: it is a book for every thinking man and woman who wishes to make his life effective for the general good, to join, however slightly, in the march of progress, or even to know what is going on in the world in respect to one of the greatest forward movements of modern medical science.

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.

The prices of net books issued by publishers who protect the prices of their new publications are preceded in this list by the double asterisk , and the word net follows the price. Works of fiction (not net) of which a minimum price is protected by their publishers, are preceded by a dagger †. The prices of net books not protected are preceded by a single asterisk *, and the word net follows the price.

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; n. p., in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

Y., Dodge Publishing Co., [1909.] 15+384 p. O. cl., $4.

A monograph upon characteristic armor and weapons, classified and described by periods during which they were in use, with the complete military equipment of the various dates. Great care has been taken to secure accuracy in every particular. Profusely illustrated, mainly from actual examples, brasses, effigies, and researches in the British Museum and other noted collections.

Atkey, Bertram. Easy money: the genuine book of Henry Mitch, his diligent search for other folks' wealth, and his urgent fear of the feminine; il. by G. L. Stampa. Bost., Dana Estes & Co., [1909.] 311 p. D. cl., †$1.50.

The author of "Folk of the wild" introduces his hero just stepping from a coasting schooner, from which he is discharged without testimonial after three months' hard work. He runs into the hands of other typical knights of the road and they all have good luck in accumulating square meals and in separating other folks from their money. They learn of hidden treasure and their search for and recovery of it makes the story. It proves to be "easy money." The hero learned many lessons "on the road"—some of them of lasting value to himself and his worthless associates.

Bailey, Liberty Hyde. The horticulturist's rule-book; a compendium of useful information for fruit-growers, truck-gardeners, florists, and others. New and rev. ed. N. Y., Macmillan, 1908, [1909.] 9+312 p. 12°, (Garden-craft ser.) cl., 75 c.

An ingenious story of an English thief, who successfully for a time casts suspicion for his own misdeeds upon a young American. The chief characters—Dunneston, the Englishman, Preston, the young American civil engineer, and Ethel Varris.

a clever American girl, who never doubts Preston—are all travelling through the English cathedral towns. "Wireless" in ordinary operation plays an essential and fascinating part in the unfolding of the plot.

Banderet, P., and Reinhard, Ph. First lessons in French; adapted by Grace Sandwith. N. Y., Thomas Y. Crowell & Co., [1909.] 8+175 p. D. (Crowell's modern language ser.) cl., *50 c. net.

The authors make no pretense to having discovered a "new" method in teaching French, or a "short-cut" for beginners in the language. Their aim has been simply to profit by the most improved or "direct" method now in vogue, and to present a text-book which should be almost self-teaching, yet at the same time should be thoroughly scientific in principle.

Benton, Guy Potter. The real college. Cin., Jennings & Graham, [1909.] c. 184 p. D. cl., *75 c. net.

Chapters on: The real college defined; The president of the real college; The students of the real college; The faculty of the real college; The real collegeman. Author is president of Miami University. A memorial volume issued in connection with the exercises attendant upon the 100th anniversary of the founding of Miami University.

Bianchi, Martha Gilbert Dickinson. The cuckoo's nest. N. Y., Duffield & Co., 1909. 12°, cl., $1.50.

Story of "smart" Americans at Paris and Monte Carlo.

Bigg, C.; D.D. The origins of Christianity; ed. by T. B. Strong. [N. Y., Oxford University Press, (Amer. Branch,)] 1909. 8+518 p. O. cl., $4.15.

Author is Regius professor of ecclesiastical history and Canon of Christ Church, Oxford. Editor is Dean of Christ Church. The author died on July 15, 1908, just as his work went to press. The work is a summary account of the history and thought of the church up to the point at which the persecuting edicts were withdrawn for the last time. The author appeals to lay readers. He has put down the results of many years of reading and described the impression which his own independent study of the ancient writers has left on his mind. He has not ignored modern developments, but his authorities are for the most part ancient rather than modern. He has given special attention to Pagan writers and to those who found points of affinity between Pagan philosophy and the new religion of their day.

Blanchan, Neltje, [pseud. for Mrs. Nellie B. Doubleday.] The American flower garden; planting lists by Leonard Barron; il. with 100 full-page photographs. N. Y., Doubleday, Page & Co., 1909. c. 15+368 p. f°, cl., $10, boxed. (1050 copies.)

Intended to cover the American garden, as William Robinson's work covers the English garden. The present book is less encyclopædic, but covers adequately the needs of the amateur whether his garden be small or extensive. Following each chapter is a list, by Leonard Barron, of the best plants suited to the purposes described. The pictures are printed as inserted plates. There are 10 in full color, and 88 plates large enough to adequately treat the subjects presented. The type is a Caslon old style. The cover is drawn by T. B. Hapgood.

Blundell, Mary E. Sweetman, [Mrs. Francis Nicholson Blundell; "M. E. Francis," pseud.] Madge-make-the-best-of-it. N. Y., Benziger Bros., 1909. il. 12°, (St. Nicholas ser. of beautiful books.) cl., *80 c. net.

Booth, W: Stone. Some acrostic signatures of Francis Bacon, Baron Verulam of Verulam, Viscount St. Alban, together with some others, all of which are now for the first time deciphered and published by William Stone Booth. Bost., Houghton Mifflin Co., 1909. c. 12+631 p. il. 4°, cl., $6 net.

Embodies the results of a search in the poems and plays of Shakespeare for the signature of Francis Bacon, placed, as the author demonstrates, in acrostic form. The author does not obtrude the side on which he has ranged himself in this old controversy. Mr. Booth proceeds, not so much in the manner of the "Baconian" as of the distinguished "detective." The author begins with some pages on the cryptography of the past to prove the credibility of the cypher idea. His book will make devout Shakespeareans read again according to the directions of this scholarly Sherlock Holmes, who believes he has unearthed a secret kept for 200 years. He has also traced to Bacon some works now attributed to Spenser, Marlowe and Puttenham.

Boswell, Ja. Boswell's Life of Johnson; ed. by Augustine Birrell. In 6 v. N. Y., Dodge Publishing Co., [1909.] 38+266; 286; 307; 302; 295; 324 p. fronts. por. D. cl., $5.

Brackett, E: A. Materialized apparitions; if not beings from another life what are they? Bost., Richard G. Badger, 1908, [1909.] c. '85. 7+8-182 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The author began by thinking mesmerism a fraud, but was finally persuaded to study it once a week and became persuaded there were people with power to magnetize and to read minds, etc. He finally became very successful in "the production of visible and tangible apparitions out of seeming nothingness"—materialization. He is a sculptor by profession and firm in his belief that these apparitions are beings from another world.

Brackett, E: A. The world we live in. Bost., Richard G. Badger, 1909. c. '03. 121 p. D. cl., $1.

First published in 1903. A continuation of the study of materialized apparitions. Author was 84 years old when he wrote these experiences.

Bradley, Andrew Cecil. Oxford lectures on poetry. N. Y., Macmillan, 1909. 9+395 p. O. cl., *$3 net.

Author formerly professor of poetry in the University of Oxford. The lectures were delivered during his occupancy of that chair and are not included in his "Shakespeare Tragedy." Most of them have been enlarged and all have been revised. Their subjects are: Poetry for poetry's sake; The sublime; Hegel's theory of tragedy; Wordsworth; Shelley's view of poetry; The long poem in the age of Wordsworth; The letters of Keats; The rejection of Falstaff; Shakespeare's Antony and Cleopatra; Shakespeare the man; Shakespeare's theatre and audience.

- Broughton, Leonard Gaston. The plain man and his Bible; with suggestions for the formation and conduct of a popular Bible class. Phil., American Baptist Publication Society, [1909.] c. 116 p. D. cl., 60 c. net.
Introduction points out there is no such guide of ethics in this world as the Bible. The author's chapters tell: How we got our Bible; The divine arrangement of the Bible; The Bible and science; Answers to Bible critics; The testimony of history and experience; The Bible our critic; How to study the Bible; How to form and conduct a popular Bible class. Dr. Broughton is well known as an active writer for thinking religious people, and as Baptist pastor of Atlanta, Ga.

For more than a decade Dr. Camphor was president of a native college in Monrovia, Liberia; he knew the African thoroughly through constant contact with him in his missionary labors. These story sketches, folk-lore, and incidents reveal something of the African as he is by nature in his native habitat, and what influence the missionary is exerting upon him in his moral and spiritual awakening. The author is a pure negro.

Cheerful Bobby Burnit, who has never had a thought above polo and Agnes Elliston, finds himself obliged by the terms of his father's will to take over the John Burnit business and personally conduct it. So Bobby sets out light-heartedly to do great things. Being totally inexperienced, he becomes the prey of various persons, but from each defeat he rises, till, after bitter experience, he learns wisdom, wins his spurs and marries the girl he loves.

Gibson, Rob. E.; Lee. A miracle of St. Cuthbert and sonnets. Louisville, Ky., John P. Morton & Co., 1909. c. 90 p. O. bds., $1.

The poem originated in the examination of an ancient ms. in the British Museum. It described the wanderings of the monks of Lindisfarne with the body of St. Cuthbert during an invasion by the Danes, A.D. 875, and also the loss and recovery of a valuable copy of the Gospels, written in honor of St. Cuthbert. The sacred manuscript is supposed to have been washed ashore on the coast of Ireland, but is entirely free of damage by water. The sonnets are on all subjects, many on authors: Byron, Shakespeare, Aldrich, Dr. Johnson, Madison Cawein, etc.

Author is lecturer in petrology in the University of Cambridge. The book is in substance a course of lectures delivered at Cambridge. Igneous action and igneous rocks are first considered from a purely geological standpoint. The middle portion of the book deals with the crystallization of igneous rock-magmas, regarded as complex solutions. Some of the questions briefly and tentatively touched in the concluding chapters are of a more speculative character, but so fundamental in their scope that they could not be passed over in silence.

A story of London soon after King James II. came to the throne, and the cruel Jeffreys was his Lord Chief Justice. The hero is a young Cornishman of noble family, who comes to London to seek his fortune. He strays into court when Jeffreys is baiting old Richard Baxter and openly takes the good old man's part, calling Jeffreys a liar. From this on he is constantly in danger of his life, having made an enemy of Jeffreys, is arrested and imprisoned and goes through many exciting episodes. An unknown woman, supposed to be Jeffrey's daughter, but discovered to be a nobly-born young woman that the cruel Chief Justice has deprived of her name and estates, helps him in many emergencies. The young people love each other and the girl is restored to her rights. The coming of William, Prince of Orange, the flight of James ends the story.

The publishers print a letter from the author requesting change of title. The new edition is cheaper than the old, but contains history of the Canal to the present date. The older edition put the sea first; now the Canal holds first attention. The writer first explored the Caribbean regions for the South American Land and Exploration Co., Ltd. For notice of 1st ed. see American Catalog, v. 2, pt. 2, 1903. Gives information in regard to affairs as they actually exist in tropical America.

Norton, Roy. The toll of the sea. N. Y., Appleton, 1909. c. 7+377 p. pls. D. cl., †$1.50.

By the author of "The vanishing fleets." The book opens with the reunion of two old friends, James Tipton, now captain of the U. S. warship "Seattle," and Bill Pape, who has spent most of his life prospecting for gold in South America. They have interesting personalities and move through the whole story. An earthquake in California, predicted by a famous scientist, is the beginning of many troubles, some remarkable changes occurring on the earth's surface. Radium, wireless telegraphy and other modern scientific discoveries play a part in the story.

Author has had long experience in the work of teacher training. His volume is approved by the Committee on Education of the International S. S. Association, which requires that the standard teacher-training course shall consist of not less than 50 lessons, at least 20 being devoted to the study of the Bible and seven each to the study of the pupil, the teacher and the Sunday-school. The maps printed are mere outlines, crudely made that they may be more easily reproduced on the blackboard. Reference books (1 p.).

This charming little arrangement of the Red Riding Hood story is not only adapted for responsive reading in the classroom, but is also not too difficult for memorizing and presenting as a play. There are five characters—the Mother, the little Girl, the Wolf, the Grandmother, and the Hunter. The stage settings are simple. The conversations are short and natural, and can be easily mastered by first-year pupils. Given with incidental songs, words and music.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

JUNE 19, 1909.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter for advertising pages should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers and librarians depend on the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY solely for their information and guidance in buying books. The Record of New Publications of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of the "American Catalog," and so forms the basis of booktrade bibliography in the United States.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."—LORD BACON.

BOOKTRADE BENEFIT ASSOCIATIONS.

AN anonymous correspondent, evidently in a bilious mood, sends us a clipping from an English periodical setting forth the advantages of the admirable Booksellers' Provident Institution, and querulously queries: "Why do we not have an institution like this? It would certainly be a great improvement on the booksellers' dinners and all the other mutual admiration society rot. . . ." We spare our readers the other invectives with which our correspondent closes his diatribe, as they do not appear to us to be to the point.

It would, indeed, be desirable to have such an institution as our English colleagues enjoy. The retail trade recognized this fact some years ago when it created the Booksellers' and Stationers' Provident Association. It wasn't a practicable move—as all knew after the disaster with which it met—and some of its officers and members, when the machinery of the Association was beginning to be put to the test, realized that a reorganization on the basis of such an organization as The Booksellers' Provident Institution would be necessary if permanency should be assured. But whenever the subject came up for discussion at the annual meetings the majority expressed itself unambiguously averse to any other arrangement than that by which they obtained for their heirs a death benefit of a thousand dollars for an annual payment of not more than twelve dollars. The officers struggled heroically to make this possible, though appeals for outside relief generally were made in vain. The author's readings instituted to provide additions to the reserve fund, while heartily encouraged by those who took part, added but a trifle to the total, compared with the inevitable expenses for the hire of the halls, etc., and labor involved to provide the entertainments. With a reserve fund which at high water mark consisted of but four thousand dollars, that, when the climax was reached was exhausted by the payment of four death benefits, and against all odds, the officers of the old Provident Association kept it afloat, hoping from month to month to steer the craft into safer waters, when an unexpected epidemic struck it. As yet the damage was not fatal, and by prompt action the Association could have been kept afloat and saved for better things; but there proved to be such a lamentable lack of esprit de corps among its members that the majority—about ninety per cent. of the membership—denouncing the management in unmeasured and unjustified terms, incontinently forsook the Association without paying the dues that were needed to preserve it insolvent. The end was not far off, and though its officers fought until only a baker's dozen of the original membership remained, the efforts to reconstruct the Provident Association as a self-supporting benefit association maintained by the whole trade—the principals as well as the employed—were unsuccessful. It was a case of "cold feet"—the members being ready enough to stand by the Association when the odds were in their favor, but more than anxious to abandon it when it became necessary to give a quid pro quo for what they expected their heirs to receive.

The Booksellers' League, which grew out of the Booksellers' and Stationers' Provident Association, while for the present engaged in laying the foundation upon which to raise a broader booksellers' association, hopes in time to develop features similar to those of the English Provident Institution. Its Constitution provides for such work as well as for the educational features which from time to time have been introduced at its monthly gatherings. Of course, all these developments will require time and the co-operation of all. It is a case of the luxuriant lawns at Oxford which, the gardener explained to an inquisitive visitor, grew so beautiful very simply. "You plant the seed and then mow them regularly each week for a couple of hundred years."

The [English] Booksellers' Provident Institution was founded seventy-three years ago by George Greenland, a bookseller in the Poultry, who, in 1836, sent out a circular letter inviting members of the trade to meet at the Albion Tavern on Fleet Street to consider the means of establishing an institution for the assistance and support of their "decayed" brethren. The effort resulted in the raising of £5000, and the leaders shared with the rank and file in the general management. The organization was formally inaugurated on February 15, 1837, at Stationers' Hall, Thomas Kelly, a bookseller, who in that year was Lord Mayor of London, acting as chairman.

In answer to an appeal, written a few months after Queen Victoria ascended the throne, contributions came in freely not only from the booktrade, but from printers, stationers, paper-makers and bookbinders. The daily and weekly papers, headed by The Times and the Athenæum, assisted the movement by appreciative encouragement in their columns and by munificent gifts of money. Eventually, from these and other sources, the very substantial fund of £30,000 was created. The donors were men of business, who knew the value of the Institution, and were able to judge of the means adopted in dealing with the fund they helped to build up.

The young Institution was greatly helped in 1840 by the establishing of a board of honorary medical officers. It was found that in many cases of illness for which claims for assistance were made, a large proportion of the sums granted was required to pay for medical assistance. This state of things was remedied once and for all by the attachment to the Institution of doctors and surgeons of standing who have always given their services promptly and without remuneration to the members' needs.

The next step was the foundation of the Booksellers' Provident Retreat, which was to form a haven of rest to receive therein aged booksellers and their widows, and to provide for their orphans until their fifteenth year. As the funds of the Institution were not available for the purpose, an affiliated society was formed to collect funds to pay for the necessary site, the erection of buildings and the maintenance of the property. While searching for a site a friend of the movement offered several acres of land pleasantly situated in the village of Abbot's Langley, in Hertfordshire. The name of the munificent donor of this estate was John Dickinson, of the famous paper mills in that county—a name not unknown in this country.

The cornerstone of the Retreat was laid in 1845, since which time the story of the two Institutions is one of continued usefulness and helpfulness, if not of continued prosperity. Each year, from the beginning until 1862, some addition was made to the capital, among them those made to the permanent fund by the treasurer of the Institution, Thomas Brown, who, in 1869, bequeathed £10,000 to the Institution and a like sum to the Retreat.

In 1871 it was brought home to the members that the surplus was being encroached upon. There was a steady increase in the applications for relief, while donations were decreasing and subscriptions for membership were quite insufficient to meet the expenditure. The difficulty was met by a series of special donations which, since 1873 to the present, have formed an important part of the income.

As to membership subscription, for a period of thirty years—that is, until 1867—the subscription payable for life membership was twenty guineas for a person under thirty years of age. Persons over thirty were admitted upon the payment of £21 and a varying "fine," as it was called, increasing in amount with the age of the incoming member. The "fine" was £3 10s up to the age of thirty-five, £8 up to forty, £13 up to forty-five, and up to the age of fifty the "fine" was £20. This system was abolished in 1867, because experience proved the desirability of charging an increased subscription from those joining when they were approaching middle age and of inducing younger persons to become members before the age of twenty-five, which is taken as the starting point for the new scale, and for which the original life subscription of £21 was allowed to stand. The annual payments range from £2 2s. at twenty-five years of age to £6 16s 6d at fifty years of age. Life membership fees range from £21 at twenty-five years of age to £68 5s at fifty.

This, in short, is the history of the attempts made by the American booktrade to help its members in the hour of need, and of the brilliantly successful operations of the English Booksellers' Provident Association in providing for its disabled members and for the widows and orphans of those who have been called from labor. The difference between the two will be apparent without further comment. On the one hand, (the American,) an admission fee of $2.10 and an assessment of $1.10 in the case of a death—ten cents of which were supposed to pay the secretary, an unsalaried officer, for postage, etc., notwithstanding the fact that the secretary, after the seventh year of the existence of the Association, up to which time the deaths averaged one a year, was obliged, in more than fifty per cent. of the cases, to send out as many as three reminders, leaving him often less than four cents as fees for clerk hire to assist him in the clerical work of keeping the accounts. It is true that according to the rules of the Association the secretary might have dropped the delinquent members; but if this rule had been drastically enforced there would have been no Association after the tenth year. On the other hand, (the English,) a reserve fund of upwards of $150,000, yielding a substantial income, augmented by gifts and other contributions. Indeed, in view of the experience passed through, it seems almost preposterous for the officers of the Booksellers' and Stationers' Association to have undertaken so large a work without any working capital. Yet, while it lasted, the Booksellers' and Stationers' Provident Association proved an angel of mercy and helpfulness in very dark hours of sorrow and distress to the dependents of many of its members, and its demise was sorely regretted.

Any future movement to afford relief to the aged and disabled bookseller and, after his death, to his family, must be begun on the broad lines adopted by the English Provident Institution; and in this movement the heads of the booktrade must be as earnestly interested as the rank and file. Until this can be made possible, the American bookseller, in cases of distress, humiliating as it may be, must continue to "pass the hat," and rest satisfied with such an organization as The Booksellers' League, which is ambitious to help in larger work for the uplift of its colleagues. The League, by the way, is even now working beyond its strength and means in providing nine dollars' worth of entertainment for five dollars a year; in administering a labor bureau free for its members and in contributing to private and public charities that concern the booktrade. If it has indulged itself on rare occasions in what our correspondent is pleased to call "mutual admiration," it has been actuated only by the laudable desire to invite to its hospitable board a few men who have deserved well of their fellow men and the trade, and to tell them to their faces and in their hearing those things which are generally said of a man when he is no longer sensible of them.

We cherish hopes that, as the booktrade prospers and begins to realize its responsibilities to its fellow members, in the years to come the American bookseller will be able to boast of as helpful a beneficiary institution as his English, German and French colleagues.

Will our disgruntled critic help in laying the foundation of such an institution by coming forward with a donation of, say, five hundred or a thousand dollars?

THE firm of A. C. McClurg & Co., through the retirement of its vice-president and the chairman of its Board of Directors, loses a staunch support which it can ill afford to spare, and the whole trade loses a member who for nearly five decades has been one of its most devoted adherents and one of its most illustrious exemplars. Raised from an humble position, in a school of earnest and competent masters, Mr. Smith steadily forged upwards, and by attending punctually to every detail required in his department, and always keeping a little ahead of his own position to be able to fulfil the duties required by the position next above that held by him, he raised himself to the very top place in his firm, to the service of which he devoted the better part of his life. May he enjoy many more years of usefulness in his retirement, to which he carries the heartiest best wishes of a host of friends in the booktrade.

THE JACKSON-HOOPER FIGHT.

THE suit brought by Walter M. Jackson, of Newton, Mass., against Horace E. Hooper and others of the Encyclopedia Britannica Company of England, had a hearing in the New Jersey Court of Chancery in Newark, N. J., on June 15.

The suit, as already noted by us, is brought to establish a partnership between the complainant and Hooper. A rule by the court has directed the defendants to show cause why they should not be enjoined from taking action prejudicial to the complainants, as directors in two corporations known as the Hooper Jackson Company, Limited, an English corporation, and the Encyclopedia Britannica Company, an Illinois corporation, Horace E. Hooper, in answering an affidavit by Jackson, in which it is averred that they were partners, declares that they never had any agreement direct or indirect in that sense. Jackson and Hooper had equal authority in the management of affairs, but there was no agreement of equality in other enterprises in which both were interested.

There did exist a joint general policy to act by mutual assent. If this last condition had existed, Hooper points out, Jackson would not have undertaken to discharge the vice-president of the Encyclopedia Company, Harris B. Burrows, without Hooper's consent, as Jackson in his petition admits he did try to do, because Hooper was opposed to the removal.

The defendant avers further that he protested time and again against the complainants having any interest in the business of Hinckley & Co., of Boston, and the Grolier Society of New York, which he alleges were engaged in practically the same kind of business as Hooper & Jackson Company, Limited, and the Encyclopedia Britannica Company.

Attorney opening for Jackson at the hearing this week told how the two corporations were organized to meet certain exigencies, chief of which related to the imposition of heavy taxes by the British Government on the business as it had been conducted by the complainant and chief defendant under what was tantamount to a partnership agreement. In each corporation, the one organized under the laws of Illinois and the other in England, each had 49 per cent. of the capital stock.

The fact of the incorporation, Mr. Jackson's counsel declared, made no difference in the manner of conducting the business of publishing the "Encyclopedia Britannica," which was the principal business of both corporations. Each partner, counsel said, drew indiscriminately on the different bank accounts maintained by the two concerns in different banks. Up to 1904 a bank account was kept in a London bank in the name of the Encyclopedia Britannica Company, but the English tax gatherer got wind of it, and it cost the company about $50,000, whereupon the account was discontinued.

His counsel asserted incidentally that it was Mr. Jackson who defeated an arrangement to sell the London Times to Cyril Arthur Pearson, and certain associates, and succeeded instead in bringing about the sale to interests associated with Lord Northcliffe.

The present situation in the Encyclopedia Company, Mr. Jackson's counsel explained, had been brought about through Mr. Jackson's act in apportioning part of the qualifying stock to a brother and a brother-in-law of Horace E. Hooper.

The view taken by the principals in the Encyclopedia Britannica publishing business, of their relations with the London Times, was brought out at the renewed hearing of the suit on June 16. The hearing was made interesting by the reading by Sherman R. Whipple, of Boston, counsel for Jackson, of extracts from letters which passed between Jackson, then in this country and Hooper in London. In a letter to Jackson, dated June 6, 1905, Hooper wrote:

I got your long letter of May 29, in regard to the book scheme. Before I got this, however, all matters had been arranged here, so your advice in regard to The Times scheme was useless. The state of the case is something like this: After a conference with Mr. Walter, chief owner of The Times, and Bell—Moberly Bell, manager, etc.—they wanted to go into the book scheme, were very enthusiastic over it, but they wanted the same guarantee that we had this year; that is, that their receipts should not go below £200,000.

I told Mr. Bell last Friday that I'd think of it till Monday. On Monday I came in and said to him: "Look here, I have come downtown to this office and put my shoulder underneath you—and you are a good heavy man—and it takes me two or three weeks to push you around into a place. Then you and I have to push Mr. Walter into a place, and that takes a week or so. Then I have to go up to High Holborn and push my partner, Mr. W. M. Jackson, into a place, and then I have to go out and enthuse the public. Needless to say, Bell was scared out of his boots, and he turned and asked me what I wanted to arrange. I said that without waiting for you I would make the arrangement that we'd guarantee him that his receipts should not be below £200,000, but that any profit from the selling of books must come to us.

In a long letter, dated Sunday, May 11, 1904, Hooper wrote to Jackson as follows:

In one of your letters to me you said that you wanted to start out with big advertising, because they were very weak-kneed at The Times. I want you to understand that they are not and have not been weak-kneed in any way, shape or manner. I arrived on Thursday at 1 o'clock, and that same afternoon at 3 o'clock the enthusiasm in The Times office was as great as it ever has been since I have known them. They are all delighted and willing to do everything that I ask them. You can imagine how delighted they are when you look at this first page of The Times which I am sending you.

I am taking dinner with the editor to-night to explain to him my wishes in regard to supplements. A financial supplement has been decided on, an engineering supplement has been practically decided on, and I am now taking dinner with Buckle to explain to him how I want the sport supplement run. However, all jokes aside, everything possible is being done by The Times office that we can possibly wish for. They are willing to let us say anything in our advertisements, do anything that we want, and make everything as we suggest.

The letter, Mr. Whipple said, went on to tell how Hooper had had Heath, "a very bright young Englishman," interview about fifty newsdealers, and that not one of them raised any objection to the scheme. The letter continued:

They thought it was splendid. They'd do everything they could to further it, and all said that it would increase the circulation of The Times very largely, with two exceptions. These two, however, said it would hurt them, because the people to whom they now rented The Times or sent it away to in the afternoon for 2d, would then subscribe; in other words, their only criticism was that it would increase the circulation of The Times. They all offer to deliver anywhere from a mile to two miles away from their newsstands, and one man actually said seven miles.

Mr. Whipple then read an affidavit from Moberly Bell, stating that he regarded Jackson and Hooper as partners. The hearing will be continued.

CENTENARY OF PRINTING IN THE NORTHWEST.

THE centenary of the introduction of the printing art in the old Northwest territory was celebrated on June 8 in the Detroit (Mich.) Museum of Art. One hundred years ago Father Gabriel Richard, one of the pioneer French priests of the Northwest, established in Detroit the first printing press that was brought into the Northwest section of the United States.

Editors and public men from many parts of Michigan, with hundreds of citizens of Detroit, attended the centenary exercises.

Melville E. Stone, general manager of the Associated Press, made the principal address.

Father Richard's primitive press, on which was run off not only the first newspaper published in the Northwest territory—the Michigan Essay, or, Impartial Observer—but also the first school books and religious publications, was brought overland from Baltimore.

F. B. SMITH RETIRES FROM A. C. McCLURG & CO.

F. B. SMITH, who has been connected with the firm of A. C. McClurg & Co. and its predecessors for almost half a century, retired from that firm and from business on April 30.

Mr. Smith has been in the book business for fifty-three years, having entered it as a lad in his native city, Bangor, Me., in 1856. He went to Chicago in January, 1862, and took a position as salesman in the bookstore of S. C. Griggs & Co., at that time one of the largest bookstores in the country.

In 1866 Mr. Smith entered the firm as the junior partner. The late General A. C. McClurg became a member of the firm at the same time.

After the great fire of 1871 Mr. Griggs sold his interest to his partners, and the firm name became Jansen, McClurg & Co. On the retirement of Mr. Jansen, in 1886, the firm name was changed to A. C. McClurg & Co.

In 1899 their whole establishment was destroyed by fire for the third time in the history of the house. The business was reorganized as a corporation and Mr. Smith became the vice-president. A few years later he was chosen as the chairman of the board of directors, which position he held at the time of his retirement.

To the older members of the trade the withdrawal of Mr. Smith will cause widespread regret. His knowledge of books covered a wide field, and for many years his advice and counsel was always sought when orders were to be placed for new books by the buyers of his firm. His judgment regarding the probable demand for new books was remarkable, while his conceptions regarding the bookseller's function always led him to reject the sensational and meretricious in literature.

The many young men whom Mr. Smith trained in bookselling will remember with gratitude the good counsel given and, in common with his many friends in and out of the trade, will wish him many years of well-earned leisure.

PROGRAM FOR THE CONVENTION OF THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF STATIONERS.

The National Association, by T. James Firnley.

In the general discussions, speeches will be limited to five minutes.

TEXT-BOOK LEGISLATION IN ILLINOIS UNCONSTITUTIONAL.

THE legislature of the State of Illinois has recently wrestled with the school book question, and, after having evolved various impossible measures to compel publishers to furnish text-books for school patrons at lower prices than could be otherwise obtained, finally passed a bill which is now found by the Attorney-General to be unconstitutional. The bill fixes a maximum schedule for certain text-books used in the public schools, but leaves the purchasers of all text-books not included in this schedule without protection. Not only does the bill fail to give equal protection to all purchasers of text-books, but by enumerating maximum prices of certain books in Section 1 of the bill, it impliedly gives the publishers of books not enumerated the right to recoup themselves for the lower prices fixed by the bill, by raising the prices of books not included in the bill. This would result in an advantage to one class of patrons in the way of price at the expense of another class of patrons, hence the Attorney-General's ruling.

BOOKS FOR THE LAKE CHAMPLAIN AND HUDSON CELEBRATIONS.

THE New York State Education Department has issued two handsomely designed books for the Lake Champlain Tercentenary, and the other for the Hudson-Fulton celebration. The covers are in colors, and each contains a beautiful frontispiece. The reading matter is largely historical, with a view of giving teachers in the public schools of New York State some ideas of making these celebrations of value to their pupils. There are also suggestions as to exercises which may be held in this connection.

The Champlain books contain a map of the Hudson River north of Albany, and of Lake George and Lake Champlain, and the Hudson-Fulton book one of the Hudson River. Both these maps are unusually complete.

PRESIDENT ELIOT'S 5-FOOT LIBRARY.

DR. CHARLES W. ELIOT has made public a partial list of the twenty-five volumes which constitute his five-foot shelf library, which he believes will give any man the essentials of a liberal education.

In making choice among the different works of a great author the aim, he says, is to take the author's most characteristic work or that one which will be most intelligible to the people of the day. "It is my belief," says Dr. Eliot, "that the faithful and considerate readings of these books, with such re-readings and memorizings as individual taste may prescribe, will give any man the essentials of a liberal education, even if he can devote to them but fifteen minutes a day."

The selections as far as have been made follow. It is necessary to explain that several titles are supposed to be bound into one volume:

"Autobiography of Benjamin Franklin."
 "Journal of John Woolman."
 "Fruits of Solitude," by William Penn.
 Bacon's "Essays" and "New Atlantis."
 Milton's "Areopagitica" and "Tractate on Education."
 Sir Thomas Browne's "Religio Medici."
 Plato's "Apology," "Phaedo," and "Crito."
 "Golden Sayings" of Epictetus.
 "Meditations of Marcus Aurelius."
 Emerson's "Essays."
 Emerson's "English Traits."
 The complete Poems of Milton.
 Jonson's "Volpone."
 Beaumont and Fletcher's "The Maids' Tragedy."
 Webster's "Duchess of Malfy."
 Middleton's "The Changeling."
 Dryden's "All for Love."
 Shelley's "Cenci."
 Browning's "Blot on the Scutcheon."
 Tennyson's "Becket."
 Goethe's "Faust."
 Marlowe's "Dr. Faustus."
 Adam Smith's "Wealth of Nations."
 "Letters" of Cicero and Pliny.
 Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress."
 Burns's "Tam O'Shanter."
 Walton's "Complete Angler" and "Lives" of Donne and Herbert.
 "Autobiography of St. Augustine."
 Plutarch's "Lives."
 Dryden's "Aeneid."
 "Canterbury Tales."
 "Imitation of Christ," by Thomas à Kempis.
 Dante's "Divine Comedy."
 Darwin's "Origin of Species."
 "Arabian Nights."

In Atlanta, Ga., on March 15, Dr. Eliot told the pupils of the High School there that he intended to devote his immediate future to the selections of enough books to fill a five-foot shelf, the reading of which for ten minutes a day would give any man a liberal education. Dr. Eliot said in his talk to the pupils then: "In the course of a public lecture I said some time ago that a shelf three feet long would hold enough books to give a person a liberal education if they be read for ten minutes each day. Immediately I was flooded with letters asking for the list of those books. I didn't have time to select them, but now that I am about to retire from the presidency of Harvard I intend to devote my time to their selection, only I have decided to make the shelf five feet long instead of three."

A. C. McCLURG & CO. ELECTS OFFICERS.

THE firm of A. C. McClurg & Co. recently concluded its fiscal year, and from the reports presented at the recent annual meeting it appears to have been highly successful.

At this meeting the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: W. F. Zimmerman, president; O. T. McClurg, vice-president and secretary; Richard Fairclough, treasurer. The only change was in the office of vice-president, in which Mr. McClurg replaced John B. Fay, who retired from business earlier in the year, after thirty years of activity with the firm. The directors of the previous year—H. A. Kasten, F. G. Browne and H. A. Gould—were also re-elected, but the office of chairman of the Board of Directors was abolished, as its incumbent, F. B. Smith, resigned his position May 1, to take a much-needed rest after his long connection with the booktrade.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

THE International Studio for July will publish what is probably the only posthumous article by the well-known architect, Russell Sturgis. The article deals with the façade of St. Bartholomew's Church, New York City, and was discovered among Mr. Sturgis's papers by his executor. Mr. Sturgis was perhaps the most distinguished writer on the subject of art and architecture that this country has ever produced, hence his present article should be of interest to the public not only for reasons of sentiment, but because of the critical acumen which it reveals.

BEGINNING with its June issue, the World's Work contains a department devoted exclusively to health matters. Everything that tends to endanger or preserve individual, commercial and national health will be brought under discussion. Important phases of the health problem will be treated by such authorities on sanitation and hygiene as Professor Irving Fisher, of Yale, and Professor William T. Sedgwick, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The present state of the health movement will be described in a series of articles by Edwin Bjorkman, who has editorial charge of the department.

DANA ESTES.

DANA ESTES, one of the founders of the firm of Estes & Lauriat and, since 1898, the head of the firm of Dana Estes & Company, we regret to learn, died suddenly at his home in Brookline, Mass., on June 16. Mr. Estes was born in Gorham, Me., March 4, 1840. His American ancestor on the paternal side was Richard Estes, of Dover, England, who came to this country in 1684. On the maternal side he was fourth in descent from Hugh McLellan, of Gorham, who came in 1733 from Londonderry, Ireland, and was a descendant of Sir Hugh McLellan, of Argyle, Scotland. Mr. Estes received his early education in the schools of his native town, and at the age of fifteen, in 1855, went to Augusta, Me., where he had his first business experience and training as a clerk in a wholesale and retail general store. In 1859 he went to Boston and engaged in the book business with Henry D. Degen & Son. Two years later, on the very day on which Fort Sumter was fired on, Mr. Estes enlisted in the Fourth Battalion Rifles, which was afterwards the nucleus of the Thirteenth Massachusetts. He was in active service until disabled by being three times wounded in the second battle of Bull Run, August 31, 1862, in which engagement his only brother, Albert S. Estes, was killed.

After recovery from his wounds he took a position temporarily with the bookselling house of William H. Hill, Jr., where he remained until the return from the war of his former employer, Henry D. Degen, with whom he formed a co-partnership under the name of Degen, Estes & Co., and carried on a small publishing and bookselling business on Cornhill. The firm made a specialty of children's toy-books, and after some years' experience, not finding the field broad enough for two, Mr. Estes sold out to his partner and took a position as salesman with the firm of Lee & Shepard, remaining with them until the firm of Estes & Lauriat was formed.

Believing in the idea of connecting the miscellaneous bookselling business with the publishing business Mr. Estes cast about to find the most able man connected with the retail book business, and succeeded in inducing Charles E. Lauriat to join him in his new enterprise, with the understanding that Mr. Lauriat was to have sole charge of the miscellaneous bookselling department, while Mr. Estes was to manage the publishing business of the firm. In 1872, just three months before the historic fire, the firm of Estes & Lauriat began business in the store at 299-301 Washington Street. The great fire came, and stopped at the very threshold of their store. Indeed, their stock was badly damaged by the blowing out of the front of the building in the efforts to stop the progress of the fire, and by the removal of a large part of their fine stock to a place of safety. Notwithstanding the discouragement occasioned by this calamity the firm proceeded to carry out its plans. The first of their large publishing ventures was the issue of Guizot's "History of France," which proved the foundation-stone of their great success and subsequent prosperity. But despite these untoward events the business moved on steadily and prospered. After the death of Samuel Walker, the veteran subscription-book publisher, Estes & Lauriat purchased the publishing plant connected with that business, and made a specialty of bringing out high-grade subscription-books, especially in the department of history, in which they published besides Guizot's histories of France and England, Martin's history of France and Duruy's histories of Greece and Rome. Another specialty in this department is their éditions de luxe of standard novelists, including Scott, Dickens, Thackeray, Bulwer-Lytton, George Eliot, Hugo, Dumas and others.

In 1890, finding that their publishing business had outgrown the offices on Washington Street in which it was conducted, Mr. Estes erected two large buildings on the Sumner Street extension, extending nearly through to Congress Street. These buildings, known as the Estes Press Buildings, and fitted with every modern improvement and convenience for the purpose, accommodate some of the largest printing and bookbinding establishments in the country, and afford headquarters for the firm's own publishing, book manufacturing, and subscription departments.

An interesting episode of the firm's publishing enterprise was their purchase of the right to publish the popular annual juvenile, "Chatterbox," and the establishment of an international trade-mark on the name of the book, in a series of eight or ten cases against infringers in the various United States Courts of the country. They were finally triumphant, after litigation lasting nearly ten years. Mr. Estes's experience in this litigation brought him prominently forward in organizing the movement to give foreign authors their rights through an international copyright law, and he acted for a number of years as secretary of the International Copyright Association.

Mr. Estes was always too busily engaged with the affairs of business to devote much time to literary work, but he edited a series of volumes entitled "Half-Hour Recreations in Popular Science," and compiled several volumes of juvenile and standard poetry. He was also much interested in archæology, and in 1888 brought from Northern Italy a large collection of Paleo-Italian antiquities of great archæological value. In late years Mr. Estes travelled much, and only a few months ago returned from a protracted journey in Africa.

Mr. Estes was first married April 11, 1867, to Louisa S., daughter of Peter and Mary (Filgate) Reid, of England. He was married again November 10, 1884, to Grace D. (Coues) Page, daughter of Samuel E. and Charlotte Haven (Ladd) Coues, of Portsmouth, New Hampshire. By the first marriage there were three children: Frederick Reid, Dana, Jr., and Philip Sydney Estes. L. Coues Page, Charles F. Page and George A. Page, of the firm of L. C. Page & Co., are his stepsons. At its commencement on June 23, 1898, Bowdoin College conferred the degree of A.M. upon Mr. Estes.

A fine portrait of Mr. Estes was given in our issue for July 2, 1898.

OBITUARY NOTES.

THE REV. EDWARD EVERETT HALE, D.D., prominent in the educational history of this country for upwards of half a century, leading clergyman of the Unitarian denomination, philanthropist, author and chaplain of the United States Senate, and practically the last of that circle that made New England known throughout the world, died on June 10, at his home in Roxbury, Mass., aged eighty-seven. Dr. Hale was born in Boston, April 3, 1822, the son of Nathan Hale and Sarah Preston Everett. Captain Nathan Hale, the patriot of the Revolution, was his great-uncle, while his father was the owner of The Boston Advertiser, a leader in financial circles and a pioneer in railroad building in this country. Edward Everett, after whom he was named, was his uncle. Almost as soon as he could walk he went to school with his elder brothers and sisters, and at the age of nine years he entered the Boston Latin School. When only thirteen years old he began his college education at Harvard. Immediately after his graduation, in 1839, he became a teacher in the Boston Latin School, where he continued two years, devoting part of his time to studying for the ministry. Some time was passed in his father's newspaper office, and there he acquired a sufficient knowledge of details to be able to fill a vacancy in any department. He was editor of The Advertiser during the war between the States. Dr. Hale was ordained as a Unitarian minister in 1842, and in the years immediately following he supplied many pulpits in various parts of the country, among other places in Washington, where he spent a winter. In 1846 he took charge of a church at Worcester, Mass., where he remained for ten years, resigning to accept a call to the South Congregational (Unitarian) Church of Boston. Dr. Hale's theory of a minister's work was expressed by himself as follows: "The man who is to preach to men of affairs must live among them, read what they read, and, to a certain extent, know what they know." In pursuance of this theory he prepared a series of public letters on Irish immigration which proved the inspiration of much subsequent state legislation. Dr. Hale's story, "My Double and How He Undid Me," published in The Atlantic Monthly in 1859, made a great impression, and was quoted far and wide. In the third year of the war between the States he published his best-known story, "The Man Without a Country." It was also published in The Atlantic Monthly, and was intended to influence the autumn elections, but for some reason it could not be brought out in season. It is considered by many to be the best sermon on patriotism ever written. Dr. Hale in the course of his lifetime founded a score of newspapers and magazines, and was a contributor to the editorial columns of as many as ten papers at one time. Perhaps the most influential book from his pen was his "Ten Times One is Ten," which led to the formation of many charitable organizations such as "Lend a Hand" clubs, "King's Daughters," "Look Up Legions" and the like. For many years he was a leading promoter of Chautauqua circles. Among his published works, besides those mentioned, are: "Margaret Percival in America," "In His Name," "Mr. Tanager's Vacations," "Mrs. Merriman's Scholars," "His Level Best," "The Ingham Papers," "Ups and Downs," "Philip Nolan's Friends," "Fortunes of Rachel," "Four and Five," "Crusoe in New York," "Christmas Eve and Christmas Day," "Christmas in Narragansett," "Our Christmas in a Palace," "Sketches in Christian History," "Kansas and Nebraska," "What Career?" "Boy's Heroes," "The Story of Massachusetts," "Sybaris and Other Homes," "For Fifty Years," "A New England Boyhood," "Chautauquan History of the United States," "If Jesus Came to Boston," "Memories of a Hundred Years," "Ralph Waldo Emerson," "We the People," "New England Ballads," "Prayers in the United States Senate" and "Foundation of the Republic." Dr. Hale became chaplain of the Senate on December 14, 1903, receiving his appointment through Senator Frye, who at that time was acting as Vice-President. The selection was made at the instance of Senator Hoar, Dr. Hale's life-long friend.

LOUIS PRANG, the founder of the famous firm of chromo-lithographers that bore his name for years, died on June 15, at Glendale, a suburb of Los Angeles, Cal., on his way to the Seattle Exposition. Mr. Prang was born in Breslau, Silesia, Germany, on March 12, 1824. His education was limited because of prolonged illness in his youth. When he was thirteen years old his father began training the boy in the calico print business. While travelling through Europe for a Bohemian manufacturer to pick up information he became allied with the revolutionists and was obliged to flee to Switzerland. He came to New York in April, 1850, almost penniless. Failing to find work here he tried elsewhere, and finally settled in Boston, at Roxbury. His first venture there was in partnership with a young architect, to publish works on ornamentation and monumental art. The result was, that at the end of the year he found himself deeply in debt. During this time, however, he had learned lithographic drawing on stone—an art then still in its infancy in the United States. Failing to produce satisfactory results as a lithographer, he took up wood-engraving, his first work being on Gleason's Pictorial, under Frank Leslie. After five years of hard work his health broke down, and he was obliged to seek some less exhausting pursuit. In July, 1856, he formed a partnership with a lithographic printer, to make a specialty of color work. Their capital consisted of one hand press and a few stones, and this was the beginning of what afterward became the vast business that made the name of Prang & Co. famous the world over, and which was the agent of the most important evolution of chromo-lithography. For years it was all uphill work, and a detailed account of their trials, discouragements and perseverance would make a touching story. Success finally crowned the untiring devotion of Louis Prang to his ideal to produce the best color work that it was possible to call into life by mechanical processes

For a quarter of a century the Prang art printing and publishing firm under the watchful care of its founders produced work that year by year became more finished in detail, and that in time was recognized even by connoisseurs abroad as equal to the best work produced in Europe. The prize competition offered by Mr. Prang for the best originals for Christmas cards by water-color artists created a wide interest in artistic circles, and was the beginning of the fashion of sending chromos at holiday time. His reproductions of the Tiffany gems and of the jades and vases in the Bishop and Walters collections were acknowledged to be the finest specimens of lithographic work ever done anywhere. Mr. Prang devoted more than forty years to the study of how to create a standard of colors, a problem that had puzzled science for centuries, the result of which was published by the Prang Educational Company. In 1897 L. Prang & Co. and The Taber Art Company, of New Bedford, Mass., were merged into the Taber-Prang Art Company. In December, 1899, Mr. Prang retired from the Taber-Prang Co. Through the Prang Educational Company, of which he was president, Mr. Prang published "The Prang Standard of Color," illustrated with plates showing 1176 colors and a number of other text-books. Mary Dana Hicks Prang, the well-known author of art text-books, is his widow.

JOHN L. SHOREY, who a quarter of a century ago conducted a school book publishing business at 21 Bromfield Street, Boston, died on June 8 at his home in Lynn, Mass. Mr. Shorey was born in Jonesboro, Me., May 21, 1820. His grandfather was an aide to General Washington. When a young man Mr. Shorey went to Lynn and for about fifteen years taught school there and in Lynnfield and in Peabody. Early in the eighteen-fifties he took a position in the publishing business of Phillips & Sampson in Boston. When that firm broke up Mr. Shorey took up the publishing business himself with Epes Sargent. Later he became the publisher of the Nursery Magazine, with an office in Cornhill. About twenty years ago he retired. When Mr. Shorey was publisher of the Nursery Magazine Mme. Nordica, then Miss Lillian Norton, worked for a time as clerk in his office, while studying at the Conservatory of Music.

MOSES KING, publisher and author of "King's Handbook of the United States," "King's Handbook of New York," and a number of other similar books, died at his home in New York, on June 12. Mr. King was born in London, Eng., April 13, 1853, and came to this country with his parents at the age of five years. The family settled in St. Louis, Mo., where young King attended the public schools. He got an early start in business and was successful from the outset. At the age of twenty-two he abandoned a lucrative insurance business to obtain a college education. He prepared for college at Phillips Exeter, and entered Harvard, graduating in 1881. He embarked in the publishing business soon after leaving college. In addition to the handbooks and guidebooks, he prepared several books of views and several works of a biographical and illustrative character, among the latter being "King's Notable New Yorkers."

GEORGE WEBB APPLETON, novelist and dramatist, died at his home in Highgate, London, on June 14. Mr. Appleton was born in New Brunswick, N. J., in 1845. After he finished his school courses he travelled extensively, making, for journalistic purposes, a foot journey of upwards of 2000 miles across the Continent. He then went to Europe, where he was correspondent for the New York Times in Paris and in Rome. Among his better known novels are "Catching a Tartar," "The Blue Diamond Mystery" and "A Fool and His Folly." His plays are "A Fair Sinner," "Zana," "The Co-Respondent," "Jack the Handy Man" and "The Unbidden Guest."

JACOB M. GORDON, Jewish author and playwright, died on June 11, in Brooklyn, N. Y., aged forty-six. In the Jewish quarters he was known as the "Yiddish Shakespeare." Among the many novels and plays he wrote are "The Unknown" and "God, Man, and Devil."

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

THE late Dr. Johannes Fastenrath, of Cologne, bequeathed to the King of Spain a sum of $12,500, from the income of which an annual prize of 2000 pesetas is to be awarded to the Spanish author producing the best literary work.

ON the 13th of June a number of medical and other societies in Frankfurt A.M. joined in the celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Dr. Heinrich Hoffmann, the author of "Struwwelpeter" and the founder of an asylum for the insane in Frankfurt-on-the-Main.

JUDAH LOEB PEREZ, of Warsaw, the Yiddish writer and poet, has been persuaded to visit the United States and to give a series of readings from his works in New York. Perez is the author of a large number of sketches and poems. A few years ago Mme. Bertha Kalich appeared at the Windsor Theatre, New York, in one of his plays, entitled "Sisters." A volume of Perez's sketches has been translated into English and issued by the Jewish Publication Society, of which Judge Mayer Sulzberger, of Philadelphia, is the president.

ONE of the most impressive scenes in the history of Brown University took place on June 16, when President Faunce conferred upon Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, the venerable author, poet and reformer, the honorary degree of Doctor of Letters. When President Faunce announced the name, Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, every one present arose. Chancellor Arnold B. Chace and Professor Wilfred Munro assisted Mrs. Howe slowly from her seat. After receiving the diploma and the white insignia of the degree she trembled slightly, and then half raised the diploma in salute, bowing slightly. At that moment the band, stationed in the gallery, struck up the "Battle Hymn of the Republic," and, with a smile lighting up her face, Mrs. Howe resumed her place.

THE Boston Transcript has discovered that Basil King is the author of "The Inner Shrine," recently brought out by Harper & Brothers. Mr. King was for ten years rector of Christ Church in Cambridge, and since 1900 he has been devoting himself to a professional career of letters. His first novel was "Griselda," and it was followed by "Let Not Man Put Asunder," "In the Garden of Charity," "The Steps of Honor" and "The Giant's Strength." Mr. King is fifty years of age, and his present residence is in Munich. He has been in this country for the past few weeks on a visit combining pleasure and business, among the arrangements that he completed being the signing of contracts for the production on the stage of a dramatized version of "The Inner Shrine."

"In all the flood of comment about George Meredith," says the London correspondent of the Buffalo Express, "practically nothing has been said about his birthplace and parentage, and the reason undoubtedly is English class prejudice—the feeling that it hurts national and family pride to admit that the greatest of English novelists of recent days was the son of a tailor. But no one in America will think the less of him for that, and so it may be divulged without damage that you can find in the opening chapters of Evan Harrington, one of the greatest of Meredith's novels, a pretty straight account of the author's origin, and probably a pretty definite indication of the attitude of Evan and his family toward the business of his father, who was a tailor. His place of business was in Portsmouth, where not only George Meredith, but also Dickens, were born. His name was Augustus Urmston Meredith, as the parish register proves. It is related that he had such gracious mien and charming manners that he was supposed by romantic ladies of the neighborhood to be a count in disguise—which fits in well with the filial description of the senior Harrington."

BUSINESS NOTES.

ALEXANDRIA, LA.—The Lawrence Bookstore has been sold to V. M. Kramer, and will hereafter be known as Kramer's Stationery and Bookstore. The business will be conducted along the same lines as heretofore, and from time to time such additions will be made as will be found necessary to the successful carrying on of the business. Mr. Kramer has retained in his employ John E. Richardson.

ATLANTA, GA.—The College Coöperative Company has been petitioned into bankruptcy.

BERKELEY, CAL.—Abbott's Bookstore has leased new quarters at No. 2193 Shattuck Avenue.

BUTTE, MONT.—B. E. Calkins, wholesale and retail dealer in paper and stationery, has closed out his general book business entirely and now handles only text-books.

CHICAGO, ILL.—The Illinois Book Exchange, (H. Zadek, manager,) has opened a branch office at 518½ East Fifty-first Street, near the Chicago University, where they will keep miscellaneous and law books.

CHICAGO, ILL.—The firm of Thompson & Thomas, 338 Wabash Avenue, have dissolved partnership by mutual consent. C. E. Thomas has taken over the real estate and ranch stock owned by the firm and will engage in the real estate business. C. C. Thompson has taken over all of the assets of the publishing business, outside of the land, and will continue in the book business under the name of The Charles C. Thompson Company, successors to Thompson & Thomas.

DAVENPORT, IOWA.—It appears that the sale of Thomas Thompson's business, reported in our issue of June 5, referred only to a portion of the stock, which was cleared out at a special sale. Mr. Thompson, we are glad to learn, still continues at the old stand and does business same as usual.

LINCOLN, NEB.—The Reed Bookstore has been purchased by the R. C. Weaver Co., of Jacksonville, Ill.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.—H. D. Eliason, bookseller, has been succeeded by H. R. Cooper.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—The Merchants' Book and Stationery Company has been incorporated by C. M. Wagner, E. O. Wagner and J. E. Dimpfl.

NEW YORK CITY.—The Industrial Publication Company has removed from 16 Thomas Street to larger and more accessible quarters at 178 Fulton Street, opposite St. Paul's.

NEW YORK CITY.—Arthur P. Jackson, of the Hawkes-Jackson Company, 38 Murray Street, has been elected president of the National Stationer Co., publishers of The National Stationer. The office of the publication will be at 38 Murray Street.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—Owing the demolition of the building in which he has been located for the last twenty years, C. J. Price, 1004 Walnut Street, has removed to 1126 Walnut Street. His friends in the trade will please note his new address.

PORTLAND, ORE.—The J. K. Gill Company has extended its establishment to all six floors of the old Masonic Temple building at the corner of Third and Alder Streets. With the new room acquired, the company has been enabled to make its office furniture and specialty departments compare with its stationery and book departments, which have long had first positions.

WHITMAN, MASS.—Charles C. Wingate, bookseller, has been succeeded by Fred G. Benson.

WHITTIER, CAL.—A. J. Holly, bookseller, has sold out to George A. Howe.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

RICHARD G. BADGER, Boston, has just published "Dyke's Corners," by E. Clarence Oakley, a story in which are described the ups and downs of a stranded cross-roads town.

THE G. W. DILLINGHAM COMPANY have just ready "The Rescuer," by Percy White, a strong story of English life and English scamps and snobs. The author's characters tell the story through their own development, and in this way their creator is enabled to express all the irony he feels.

EDWIN S. GORHAM, New York, will publish on the 22d inst. "The Omar Sonnets," in new sonnet form, translated and edited by Oliver Opp Dyke. The book will be superbly printed from type in red and black inks, on hand-made paper, bound in vellum, and the edition will be limited to two hundred and fifty copies.

DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & Co. have in preparation for the fall two new stories by E. F. Benson. "The Reaping," which will probably make its appearance in September, is more a collection of essays on music, etc., than a story, although a tale "hangs thereby;" while "The Fascinating Mrs. Halton" is a novel in his best style. Mrs. Halton hears that her pretty niece contemplates marrying an "impossible" man, so she sets about to break the match.

AMONG dramatized novels of the past eight or ten years few have been such a good paying venture as "Quincy Adams Sawyer," by Charles Felton Pidgin. Now that "The Further Adventures of Quincy Adams Sawyer" has been brought out by L. C. Page & Company, it will be interesting to note if this sequel will reach the high water mark of the first book, or whether, gathering more momentum from its unusually good start, it may swamp "Quincy Adams Sawyer" in the flood-tide of its prosperity.

DUFFIELD & Co. will publish late in the summer a new book by Albert Sonnichsen, entitled "Confessions of a Macedonian Bandit," in which the author of "Ten Months a Prisoner Among the Philippines," "Deep Sea Vagaries," etc., tells of his adventures in Macedonia as a member of the Committee of Revolution. While discussing current Balkan events, the book may also serve as a guide to little known spots in Macedonia, the small countries surrounding it, and Turkey. The illustrations are from photographs taken by Mr. Sonnichsen.

W. H. LOWDERMILK & Co. have brought out a bibliographical account of the very rare map of Kentucky made by John Filson and engraved by Henry D. Pursell for his "History," published by T. Rook, of Philadelphia, in 1784, prepared by P. Lee Phillips, chief of the map division of the Library of Congress, to accompany a facsimile reproduction made from the map recently acquired by the library. The volume is a quarto of twenty-two pages, besides the map. The publishers announce that if sufficient encouragement is received similar monographs will be published on other rare American maps, such as Romans's map of Florida (1774) and Hermann's map of Virginia (1673).

"THE MAKING OF BOBBY BURNIT," by George Randolph Chester, is published this week by the Bobbs-Merrill Company. Since its successful appearance as a serial this story of a million-heir and his father's business has been much enlarged, wrought into a cohesive novel and given additional emphasis in the love-element to balance the business interest. Great curiosity in the book has been aroused by the advertisement in advance of publication referring to the book as "Bobby" and offering to give a copy to anybody who would complete the title and name the publishers. Replies poured in from all quarters of the United States. About one answer in every four was correct.

THE CLUB OF ODD VOLUMES, Boston, has just published a lecture on "The Library of Rameses the Great," by Dr. Charles N. Nichols, read April 15, 1908. It is a pretty little book, with frontispiece and vignette engraved by Sidney L. Smith. Eighty-seven copies only are printed. Iamblicus, writing in 325 A.D. of the Egyptian mysteries, said that there were 20,000 books in this famous library, probably papyrus rolls preserved in cylinders. Dr. Nichols refers to several manuscripts in the British Museum and elsewhere, which may have formed a part of it, but nothing definite can be identified. Four pillars only are still standing of this, probably the oldest of all public libraries.

GINN & Co. will publish in time for class use in the fall a volume on "The Economic History of the United States, 1765-1860," with introductory essays, by Guy Stevens Callender, professor of political economy in the Sheffield Scientific School, Yale. This book is in the series of Selections and Documents in Economics, of which other volumes are Bullock's "Selected Readings in Public Finance" and "Selected Readings in Economics;" Carver's "Sociology and Social Progress;" Commons's "Trade Unionism and Labor Problems;" and Ripley's "Railway Problems and Trusts, Pools and Corporations." Professor Callender's collection in this volume makes available material which could hardly otherwise be used in large classes.

THE wonderful changes which are being made in the topography of Manhattan Island, through building and construction, are decreasing so rapidly the opportunities for geological investigation that the appearance this week through Henry Holt & Company of a third and greatly enlarged edition of "The Geology of the City of New York," by L. P. Gratacap, of the American Museum of Natural History, is especially timely. The new material includes not only the results of recent investigation of the geology of Manhattan but also of Brooklyn, as well as an epitome of the geology of Long Island. Professor Kenneth McKenzie's edition for colleges of Hugo's famous drama of "Ruy Blas," which has been delayed, is also just ready.

THE BAKER & TAYLOR COMPANY have just ready a "Child's Guide to American History," by Henry W. Elson, the third of the Child's Guide Series. They will publish, probably in September, John Bigelow's "Retrospections of an Active Life." The work, which will be in three dignified volumes, will cover the period between 1817 and 1867. In it will be found a full account of the Trent Affair and of Maximilian's occupation of Mexico, both from an authoritative source, with original documents, while anecdotes of Lincoln, Sumner, Cobden, Bright, Thackeray and Queen Victoria will appear in abundance. Mr. Bigelow, it will be recalled, was Minister to France 1865-1867, having previously been Consul at Paris; Secretary of the State of New York, 1867-1868, and some years partner of William Cullen Bryant in the New York Evening Post.

JOHN W. LUCE & Co., Boston, have bought the elaborate edition of William Austin's "Peter Rugg, the Missing Man," prepared by the R. E. Lee Company, recently dissolved by the withdrawal of Robert E. Lee. Luce & Co. will bring out the book in a few weeks, with an introduction by Colonel Higginson and illustrations and decorations by F. J. Alford. Luce & Co. are also preparing a book entitled "Did Your Child Say This?" a collection of juvenile sayings and doings of which the nucleus was a collection made by the late Rear Admiral Preble and left with very slight editing and a note indicating a hope that it might be valuable to his children. Edited and enlarged by his son, another George Henry Preble, it will be brought out in the fall, with the holiday books and in a holiday dress. The firm's Birch Bark Book for 1910 will be "Rip Van Winkle."

THE FLEMING H. REVELL COMPANY publish to-day "The Life of George Grenfell, Congo Missionary and Explorer," by George Hawker, with illustrations. Although the name of Dr. Grenfell, of Labrador, has become almost a household word in America, few have even heard of George Grenfell, one of the greatest names in the annals of equatorial Africa. Mr. Hawker presents a portrait of Grenfell which all who knew him will pronounce to be accurate as it is sympathetic, at once faithful and satisfying. The man stands before the reader in all the ardor of his consecration, and in his consciousness of the world's needs, in his eager and heroic spirit longing to extend the "Empire of Christ," in his dauntless perseverance, his practical skill and energy—as explorer, engineer and missionary—with a rare power of winning the confidence and love of his comrades, and a real master of men.

THE CENTURY COMPANY will publish shortly a new novel by Ernest Oldmeadow, author of "Susan," etc., entitled "Antonio." The hero of the story is ordained "Father" on the day when the monasteries of Portugal are suppressed, but he vows to get back his order and its home. In the meantime he travels in England and learns English, and is known as a wine-grower and merchant. As he is about to take possession of the monastery it is bought by an eccentric English peer. Antonio and the daughter of the foreigner are thrown much together, with the result that the monk and man have a struggle over his love for the girl. They will bring out at the same time Dr. H. S. Williams's "Alcohol: its Effect on the Individual, the Community, and the Race," based on three articles by him, contributed to McClure's Magazine, but which he has enlarged and to which he has added new chapters and a number of important tables.

THE recent death of Professor Johann Nepomuk Sepp, of the University of Munich, recalls the days of Lola Montez, when the captivating dancer ruled the heart of the famous Ludwig I., and was for nearly a year the uncrowned queen of Bavaria. Professor Sepp was a deadly enemy of the Countess of Landsfeld, (the title King Ludwig gave his favorite,) and his opposition to her caused his banishment for three years from Munich. Lola Montez, whose life by Edmund B. d'Auvergne has just been published by the John Lane Company, had herself been driven from Munich two years before the expiration of Professor Sepp's banishment, and made her famous trip to the United States in 1851, which Mr. d'Auvergne describes. To many readers, however, the intimate picture of some of the courts and literary and musical circles of Europe will be even more fascinating than Lola Montez's remarkable advertising of herself in this country.

IN the "Little Stories of the Town" column of the Boston Journal the following item was recently printed: How many of the 550,000 people who pass through Newspaper Row daily—these are the figures by one day's actual count—ever noticed the memorial tablets on the building adjoining the Boston Journal office—and how many can tell its history? The tablets read:

HENRICVS
COLL—HARV—D
1860
PRAESETSOC

Henry Webb was a student of Harvard many years ago, and at the time of his death he left the property where the publishing house of Little, Brown & Co. now stands to the Cambridge University. The present building was erected in 1860, and the property is still owned by Harvard College and is held without taxation.

THE DODGE PUBLISHING COMPANY, 214 East Twenty-third Street, New York, have just brought out a neat six-volume edition of Boswell's Life of Johnson, edited by Augustine Birrell. The edition is printed from small but readable type on good paper and is bound in library style—cloth with paper labels. Each volume has a frontispiece portrait or a view of a place associated with Johnson's name, done in photogravure. They have also just brought out a work on "Arms and Armour," by Charles Henry Ashdown, curator of numismatics, Herts County, [Eng.] Museum, a companion volume to Fox-Davies and Graham Johnston's "Complete Guide to Heraldry." The work deals with the subject from prehistoric times to the introduction of gunpowder and its influence upon armor, and is illustrated with 450 engravings in the text and 42 plates from actual examples, missals, illuminated mss., brasses, effigies, etc., and from original research in the leading museums and many private collections. Two other books also just ready are "The Love Poems" of Robert Browning and Leigh Hunt, with rubricated initials and tastefully bound in watered silk with dainty design; and a year book entitled "Friendship Through the Year," with a sentiment for every day of any year compiled by Mamie Jones Lander, attractively printed, with an artistic border in red.

IN this age when so much of the best thought is given to the child and its development, nothing is of greater importance than the books the boys and girls need. It is important that they grow to be lovers of books, and it is never too soon to commence to foster this desire—or so, at least, the Saalfeld Publishing Company, of Akron, Ohio, firmly believe. That is the reason they have issued such a splendid line of Muslin Books. These books are printed on cloth, so they are soft and pliable, and the leaves are double, making it easy for baby to turn them. They are printed in colors with non-poisonous inks, another notable feature, for mothers need not worry for fear of evil results if the child puts the leaves in its mouth and chews it. The illustrations, one on every page, are in bright colors, and the accompanying verses are simple jingles, sure to find instant favor. For 1909 this house is issuing a series called the Tinted Cloth Series, which is a departure from the regulation muslin books made heretofore. There are four titles: "Birds," "Flowers," "Butterflies," and "Garden A B C," and each book is printed on a delicately tinted cloth. The titles lend themselves with rare adaptability to beautiful illustrations, of which fact the artists have taken full advantage. Nature has been followed faithfully, and so these books are valuable from an educational point of view.

"THE BRIDE OF THE MISTLETOE," James Lane Allen's new novel, will be published by the Macmillan Company on June 24. Of this work, the first from his pen in several years, Mr. Allen himself says: "One point on the field of human nature is located; at that point one subject is treated, in the treatment one movement is directed toward one climax." Adhering rigidly to this complete artistic unity, Mr. Allen has treated of a theme vital to the America of to-day. They have nearly ready a new book by Charles Major, the author of "When Knighthood Was in Flower," entitled "Gentle Knight of Old Brandenburg," the principal characters in which are the charming and witty Wilhelmina, the sister of Frederick the Great of Prussia, and her admirers, the good-natured, corpulent Margrave of Schwedt and Fritz of Bayreuth, who was so big that he caught Frederick William's eye and was kidnapped into that monarch's army as a consequence. They also expect to publish this month a revised edition of "Oils, Fats and Waxes," by Dr. J. Lewkowitsch. The work is in three volumes, and has been largely rewritten and augmented. The author is consulting and analytical chemist and chemical engineer examiner in the manufacture of soap and oils and fats for the City and Guilds of London Institute. The three present volumes contain everything that must be known in the practice of the analytical and technical chemist for the manufacture of products made of oils, fats and waxes.

THE FUNK & WAGNALLS COMPANY announce a new and important work for publication this fall, entitled "The Best of the World's Classics," of which Senator Henry Cabot Lodge is the editor-in-chief. The work will be issued in ten volumes, illustrated, and bound in levant. Senator Lodge is usually classed as the chief representative in America of the scholar in political life. While he has represented the State of Massachusetts in the House for six years, and in the Senate for sixteen years, he has to his credit a long list of original works and of important works edited by him, which are all the more remarkable because of his constant activity on the floor and in committee rooms of Congress. The ten volumes will contain the best prose from what Senator Lodge believes to be the greatest books in the world, arranged chronologically by countries, beginning with Greece and then taking up Rome, Great Britain, Continental Europe and America. Senator Lodge has selected, for inclusion in the collection, the work of about 240 authors. The selection has been the result of careful and mature judgment, and the application of rigid rules of exclusion. The entire field of ancient and modern literature has been searched, in order to choose from the great masters a list of what is really best in the world's literature. The literature of all languages has been resorted to, but works in foreign tongues are presented in English. For each selection biographical and explanatory notes have been prepared to the number of about 1200. In the preparation of the work Francis W. Halsey is associated with Senator Lodge.

HOUGHTON MIFFLIN COMPANY have brought out this week "The Autobiography of Nathaniel Southgate Shaler, with a Supplementary Memoir by his Wife." The appeal of this remarkable book is not limited to the many thousand Americans who knew and loved the late Professor Shaler. His life was a rarely interesting one. Born in Kentucky, of the old Southern aristocracy, he went to Harvard in the period just preceding the war between the states. Later he served in the Federal army, and then as professor of geology in Harvard, as dean of the Lawrence Scientific School, as the intimate friend of all the leading scientists of the last half of the nineteenth century, and as a writer not only on scientific subjects, but of belles-lettres—prose and verse—he led a life of unusual richness and significance. Although the autobiography was not finished at the time of Professor Shaler's death, Mrs. Shaler has found it possible to carry it on to completion, and, by the aid of a vast mass of letters, note-books, etc., to tell the final chapters of the story practically in Professor Shaler's own words. They have also just ready a volume entitled "Adrift on an Ice Pan," by Wilfred T. Grenfell, an account of Dr. Grenfell's wonderful escape from almost certain death off the Labrador coast, with an introduction by Dr. Clarence J. Blake, and a number of illustrations from photographs; "Education in the Far East," by Charles F. Thwing, president of the Western Reserve University, a readable and interesting study of the relations of education and civilization in Japan, China, India, Korea, the Philippines and Egypt; "The Advertisements of The Spectator," by Lawrence Lewis, with an introduction by Professor George L. Kittredge, the value of which as a source book for the study of social customs and economic conditions in the early eighteenth century cannot be overestimated; "Addresses and Reprints, 1859-1907," a collection of some representative writings of the late Moncure D. Conway, which has been prepared by his family as a memorial volume; also, "American Classics," a collection of complete masterpieces of prose and poetry suitable for reading in the seventh and eighth grades, with biographical sketches, portraits of the authors, explanatory notes, etc.

PICK-UPS.

"Knowing I lov'd my books, he furnish'd me From mine own library with volumes that I prize above my dukedom."—The Tempest, Act i., Sc. 1.

A LITERARY FABLE.—Often and often the man sat under the tree, and always its shade and the sweetness thereof stimulated in him the process of thought. But one day some persons came and cut the tree down and ground it up into pulp, of which they made books. And the reading of these, indispensable to culture in the accepted sense, left the man no time to think.—Puck.

To sell books, we must buy books. We are as willing to buy salable books as to sell buyable books.—George Kleinteich.

ENTERPRISING CLERK.—Customer (to clerk).—Will you get "Under the Trees and Elsewhere" for me? Clerk.—Mabie.

HELPFUL LITERATURE.—"What books have helped you most?" asked the serious young woman. "I don't remember their names," answered Senator Sorghum. "But they're the government publications I am permitted to present to my admiring constituents."—Washington Star.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.

Under the heading "Books Wanted" book-trade subscribers, under their own names, are given the privilege of a free advertisement for books out of print of five nonpareil lines, exclusive of address, in any issue except special numbers to an extent not exceeding 100 lines a year. If more than five lines are sent the excess is at 10 cents a line, and amount should be inclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, or those advertising anonymously, must be paid for at the rate of 10 cents a line. All objectionable books will be excluded so far as they come under our notice.

Under the heading "Books for Sale," the charge to subscribers and non-subscribers is 10 cents a nonpareil line for each insertion. No reduction for repeated matter.

All other small undisplaced advertisements will be charged at the uniform rate of 10 cents a nonpareil line. Eight words may be reckoned to the line.

Parties with whom we have no account must pay in advance, otherwise no notice will be taken of their Communications.

BOOKS WANTED.

Ⓐ In answering, please state edition, condition, and price, including postage or express charges.

Houses that are willing to deal exclusively on a cash-on-delivery basis will find it to their advantage to put after their firm-name the word [Cash.]

Ⓑ Write your wants plainly, and on one side of the sheet only. Illegibly-written "wants" will be considered as not having been received. The "Publishers' Weekly" does not hold itself responsible for errors.

It should be understood that the appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the "Publishers' Weekly," does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it is endeavored to safeguard these columns by withdrawing the privilege of their use from advertisers who are not "good pay" book-sellers should take the usual precautions, as to advertisers not known to them, that they would take in making sales to any unknown parties.

Bibliographical Helps

ISSUED FROM

THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY OFFICE

The Publishers' Weekly

Recognized as the representative of the publishing and bookselling interests in the United States. Contains full weekly record of American publications, with monthly indexes, cumulated quarterly, news of interest concerning the book trade, lists of "Books Wanted," (an advertising feature which each subscriber can use without charge to the extent of 100 lines per year,) etc., etc. Subscription, $4.00 a year; to foreign countries, $5.00 a year.

The Annual American Catalog, 1908

In two parts: A short-title index to all the book publications of the year and a full-title index, with brief annotation of the leading books of 1908. (Ready March, 1909.) 8vo, cloth, $3.00.

The American Catalog, 1905-1907

Vol. I containing in one alphabet an index to all books published during 1905-06-07; under author, title, subject and series entries. 8vo, half morocco, $7.50.

Vol. II containing the full-title Weekly Record material of The Publishers' Weekly for the same years, in a separate alphabet for each year. 8vo, half morocco, $6.00.

The American Catalog, 1900-1905

Vol. I contains a five-year cumulation, Jan. 1, 1900-Jan. 1, 1905, giving in one alphabet, by author, title and subject, information of the books issued during the years covered by this period. It also contains a directory of over 3800 publishers, with street addresses. 8vo, half morocco, $7.50.

Vol. II or Supplementary volume gives the full-title entries with annotations printed in the Weekly Record of The Publishers' Weekly, cumulated into an alphabet for each year, i.e., into five alphabets 1900, 01, 02, 03, 04. This is planned to answer the demand of such libraries, bookdealers, and others as want the full material of The Publishers' Weekly bibliographical system in available shape. 8vo, half morocco, $7.50. The set of two, $15.

Of the previous series of THE AMERICAN CATALOGUE, quarto size, the earlier volumes are out of print. We have remaining a few copies of the volumes 1890-95 and 1895-1900, bound in half morocco, $15.00 each.

The Publishers' Trade List Annual

Contains the latest catalogues of upward of 200 American publishers, contributed by themselves and arranged alphabetically by the firm-names, with smaller lists, fully indexed, at the end of the volume, indispensable to every one who has any interest in the sale or purchase of books. Large 8vo, cloth, $2.00.

Index to the Publishers' Trade List Annual, 1902, out of print.

The Supplementary Index, 1903-1904, 500 pages, 8vo, cloth, with thumb index, $3.00. The alphabet in this volume is supplementary to the original Index of 1902.

The Library Journal

Chiefly devoted to library economy and bibliography. Established in 1876. Published monthly. Subscription $4.00 a year, postpaid; single numbers, 35 cents. Price to Europe or other countries in the Union, 16s. a year; single numbers, 1s. 6d.

The Annual Library Index

Including Periodicals, American and English; Essays, Book-Chapters, etc., Bibliographies, Nomenclology, Index to Dates of Principal Events, and a Directory of Libraries. Edited, with the co-operation of members of the American Library Association and of The Library Journal staff, by W. I. FLETCHER. (Published annually.) The volume covering 1908, $5.00; all prior volumes, $3.50 each.

The American Educational List

Contains a price-list of the text-books in use in the United States, arranged alphabetically by author's or editor's name, and a detailed subject-index, referring from each specific subject to authors of books on that subject. (Published annually.) 8vo, leatherette, 50 cents.

English Catalogue of Books (Annual)

Containing a complete list of all the books published in Great Britain and Ireland in the calendar year, with index to subjects. 8vo, cloth, $1.50.

Directory of Publishers

Contains names and addresses of 3789 firms and individuals who issued books in the U. S. from Jan. 1, 1905, to Dec. 31, 1907. (Reprinted from The American Catalog.) 8vo, leatherette, red edges, $1.00.

The Profession of Bookselling

A handbook of practical hints for the apprentice and bookseller. By A. GROWOLL, managing editor of The Publishers' Weekly, author of "A Bookseller's Library," "Three Centuries of English-Booktrade Bibliography," etc. Parts 1 and 2. 8vo, boards, each $2.00. (Concluding part in preparation.)

Publications of Societies

A provisional list of the publications of American scientific, literary and other societies, from their organization. Compiled under the editorial direction of R. R. BOWKER. Schedules nearly 1000 societies issuing publications, and gives title-entries of all their publications, as far as data could be obtained from the societies and from libraries. 8vo, paper, $2.50.

State Publications

NEW YORK

JUST PUBLISHEDTHE SCARLET FEATHER*By HOUGHTON TOWNLEY

Mr. Townley proved in The Bishop's Emeralds that he was a writer second to none. In The Scarlet Feather he has written a worthy successor to his former success, for The Scarlet Feather is even a greater book than The Bishop's Emeralds.

WILL GREFÉ, as the illustrator, has done his best in his own inimitable way.

Cloth, 12mo, $1.50THE THREE KEYS*By FREDERIC ORMOND

In The Three Keys, Frederic Ormond has done himself proud as an author. This is a story of the New York of today. Love, adventure, action and mystery are all properly blended, and the result is a story away above the usual.

HARRISON FISHER is the illustrator.
